

Valley woman reads the future

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

BILLIE ARNOLD of Carmel Valley has 78 different business cards without her name printed on them.

That's because they're a deck of playing cards. The game is the future.

Mrs. Arnold is a tarot reader. An amateur fortune-teller who uses a deck of cards to try to explain the past and prophesy the future.

Tarot cards are the traditional fortune-telling deck the Gypsies use. It is believed the cards originated in Egypt six centuries ago. Since then the pictorial symbols represented on them have evolved through time into a blend of pagan-Christian motifs.

Don't look for a royal flush when Mrs. Arnold puts her cards on the table. But for persons willing to spend $10 for a one-hour tarot reading, they might get a sneak preview of what lies ahead, she said.

"I usually manage to sort of laugh my way through the reading," explained the 30-year-old housewife and mother. "Sometimes people get mad. They say, 'That's my future you're laughing at.'"

Actually, Mrs. Arnold takes tarot cards seriously. She laughs only to ease the tension of nervous clients.

"People's lives don't hinge on my readings. But something I say might give them a hint about what to do concerning a certain problem they have," she explained.

TAROT IS NOT as strange as it first might seem. Each of the 78 cards depicts a scene or a person from which the tarot reader divines mystical interpretations.

Mrs. Arnold reads a person's fortune by placing 20 cards face down on a table in front of him. First, the client does the shuffling. Then Mrs. Arnold arranges the cards in meticulous order, in a kind of cross-like pattern.

The cards are slightly larger than those in a deck of regular playing cards. The artwork is fancier. Many of the same symbols are similar to both decks. Tarot cards are usually more expensive, ranging in price from $6 to $35 per pack.

The deck of tarot is divided into 22 "Major Arcana" cards, depicting such powerful figures as Death, the Devil, Justice, the Hanged Man, the Magician and the Fool.

Mrs. Arnold calls these 22 cards the "biggies," because they have the controlling influence on the other 56 cards. These other cards are called the "Minor Arcana." They are divided into four suits of 14 cards each. The suits are called Cups, Wands, Swords and Pentacles.

Mrs. Arnold keeps her tarot deck wrapped in soft, brown cloth.

"That way they don't pick up stray energies floating around in the air," she explained.

"and neither do I"

ONCE THE READING begins, Mrs. Arnold turns over the 20 cards dealt one by one, interpreting out loud what she sees as the meaning of each one.

For instance, if a "Page of Cups" turns up, the card—which resembles a jack of hearts—means that one's life will soon be filled with happiness. But if a "nine of Swords" turns up, this could mean trouble ahead.

According to Mrs. Arnold, the cards don't lie.

"And neither do I," she said. "You better

Laureles Lodge application delayed until March

JOHN BULMER, manager and part owner of the Los Laureles Lodge in Carmel Valley, has a dilemma.

A controversial plan to expand the lodge is stymied until the Monterey County Planning Commission informs the lodge owners whether their plan to enlarge the 23-room resort to 72 units is compatible with the rural residential character of the neighborhood.

That won't happen before March 14.

The commission last week voted 9-0 to hold a second land use hearing in March to consider the reduced expansion proposal made by the six-member corporation which owns the lodge.

But Bulmer would have liked some indication sooner from the commission on how many units would be acceptable.

"They won't give you the answers. What is a sensible reduction?" he asked.

Existing zoning for the 9.4-acre parcel could allow up to 10 motel units per acre with a use permit.

Last May, the commission turned down a plan to increase the size of the lodge to 94 units. At the time, commissioners said they would consider a smaller project.

Commissioner Peter Cailotto said at last week's hearing that he recalled discussing an increase of 25 to 30 percent in the number of guest rooms at the lodge. That would allow for six or eight more rooms for a potential maximum of 31 rather than 22 units.

Bulmer noted that the Valley Lodge, another resort motel on Carmel Valley Road, a mile east of Los Laureles Lodge, recently won approval to build 31 additional units on three acres—the same 10-unit-per-acre density he requested last year.

Bulmer said he sympathizes with the neighbors who oppose expansion of his lodge. But he also questioned if the county has any consistent policy on motel density or whether the whole issue is governed by how many complaints are made.

Bulmer and his representatives met with neighbors of the lodge twice after their 94-unit expansion was rejected. But they could not reach a compromise on the number of units which would be acceptable to both sides.

ATTORNEY ROBERT D'Isidoro, representing the lodge owners, asked the commission last week to authorize an environmental impact report (EIR) on the 72-unit proposal. If the report uncovered problems with that size project, it could be scaled back at a later time, he said.

To decide how many units to allow without considering the environmental impact of the specific expansion plan is "almost an arbitrary or subjective judgment," he said.

D'Isidoro said the lodge owners would be willing to have an EIR prepared on their expansion plans without accepting the move as a tacit admission that the size of the project is acceptable.

"I don't think we should fall into that trap," Cailotto said. An EIR prepared on that basis would not deal with a smaller project and the general issue of expansion. It would deal specifically with a 72-unit lodge, he said.

That would be "fooling the applicant," he said. There is no consensus in Carmel Valley that 72 rooms is acceptable, Cailotto added.

TOM TRAINOR, who lives in the Middle Canyon area above the lodge, said neighbors still consider the expansion "out of line with the rural residential character of the

Odello development hearing Wednesday

A PROPOSAL for the development of the Odello East property at Highway 1 and the Carmel River will have its first public hearing before the Monterey County Planning Commission Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 14.

The commission will hear a report on the draft Specific Plan for the 134-acre parcel, presented by the Sausalito consulting firm which prepared the document.

The hearing is planned at 3 p.m. in the Monterey County Board of Supervisors' chambers, Church and Alisal streets, Salinas.

neighborhood" because of the 300 percent increase over the present size of the resort.

Signatures of 29 neighbors opposed to the expansion were presented to the commission along with a letter claiming they represent several hundred Valley residents. The Bulmers submitted a petition of 73 signatures in favor of expansion.

Gordon Barrow, another neighbor of the lodge, said he believes the project supporters "like the lodge as it is. They are not supporting a drastic change in the lodge."

The expansion proposal calls for tearing down the existing motel units, all of which are housed in ranch buildings at least 30 years old. They would be replaced at a rate of 10 to 20 units per year. The existing dining room, bar and office would remain. New construction would include three two-story buildings.

If the commission, at the March 14 land use hearing, finds the expansion consistent with the guidelines in the existing Carmel Valley Master Plan, the next step would be to order an EIR for the project.

The Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee suggested an EIR but recommended against approval of the 72-unit proposal as not in keeping with the Valley's character.

Bulmer said he hopes the commission will give him some idea at the hearing as to what size project they will consider. He said he doesn't think he should have to "second guess" their thoughts.

watch out, because I'll tell you exactly what your cards say."

She said the cards can peek into the subconscious and tell people about such things as their love life, their financial status and any travel plans that lie ahead.

MRS. ARNOLD, a native of Jackson, Tenn., told one friend recently that she was about to go on a trip with a blond man born under the Aquarian astrological sign.

The friend laughed. She said she knew no such man.

But six days later, she was off on a vacation with a man fitting the general description.

One man's card reading showed "unfaithfulness" in his life. A few days later, Mrs. Arnold said, he told her he found out his wife was having an affair.

Why do people get their cards read? "They're just curious," replied Mrs. Arnold. "Everyone wants to know his or her future."

She first learned about the art of tarot reading five years ago. Her six-year-old son, who's now 11, found a tarot deck in an old Monterey home that was about to be torn down. She gave him 25 cents for the deck.

"I just got to fooling around with them," she said. "I read up on them. I'd bring them to a party, and pretty soon everyone would be gathered around me asking me to read their fortune," she said.

Then, she took a course in tarot reading in Seaside. She studied the meanings of each card.

"I don't really think of myself as a mystic, although everyone has within them some degree of mysticism," she said.

Mrs. Arnold's customers are of all ages and backgrounds—teachers, electricians, artists "and plenty of welfare recipients," she said with a laugh.

Mrs. Arnold doesn't like to make house calls. But she will make an exception for "emergency" readings on "urgent matters," she said.

There are some people whose cards she refuses to read. Family and close friends are out.

"I know those people too well; and I start to read into the cards," she said.

Also, she refuses readings of people she dislikes.

"I don't want their bad energy touching my cards," she explained.

Mrs. Arnold will not read her own fortune, either. And she seldom consults other tarot readers. "I just can't afford them," she said.

Mrs. Arnold believes in her abilities. So does her husband, Richard, who is a carpenter. She also studies creative writing at UC Santa Cruz.

"For a long time I never even mentioned I was a tarot reader. People thought I was weird," she said as she carefully wrapped up her deck in the brown cloth. "But now," she added, "I'm kind of arrogant about it."

MRS. ARNOLD believes the cards have mystic powers.

"Each card is more or less a hieroglyph, having certain symbols on them. These symbols have a history of mystical interpretation. During a reading certain symbols stand out to me. These are the ones I believe to represent or to be influencing the person whose fortune I'm reading," she explained.

For example, she added, the tarot card called "The Fool" shows a young man with a dog. "The dog represents faithfulness. The flowers, a rose, that he holds in his hand symbolizes purity. The staff he carries over his shoulder would be the symbol of strength," Mrs. Arnold said.

Why does she believe in the so-called mystic powers of the cards? "Well," Mrs. Arnold replied, "because I've seen results from the readings. Things the cards foretold have come true. There is so much to this that I can't really explain."

Valentine's auction benefits B.S.I.

"Saint Valentine's Finest Auction," to benefit the Behavioral Sciences Institute Foundation, will offer a wide variety of merchandise and prizes, Sunday, Feb. 11 in the Sierra Grand Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The live auction, silent auction, and the prize drawing are all part of the fund-raising event to reach a goal of $100,000 for the purchase of equipment, and rehabilitation and educational services for residents of Monterey County.

The auction officially opens at 3 p.m. with a silent auction.

New face at the window

DROP INTO THE Carmel Valley Post Office and meet Terry Williams who has been appointed our new postmaster.

The new face at the stamp window replaces Joe Fischer who retired last year and is now living at Toro Park. His pursuits include education, politics, travel, carpentry and other hobbies.

The former Gonzales postmaster served in the Army from 1958 until 1962 when he joined the Postal Service. He resides in Seaside.

Light bulb sale benefits CHS band

MEMBERS OF the Carmel High School Band have undertaken a fund-raising project to help underwrite expenses of their organization, according to Booster Band Club president, Tom Williams, by offering the public a bargain in lightbulbs. Sylvania lightbulbs, in three sizes, are selling for $2.50—a bonus of five bulbs for the usual price of four.

Anyone wishing to place an order may phone Tom, 659-4357 or the band director, Henry Avila, at 625-2911.

Carmel Young Life members ski Bear

MEMBERS OF THE Carmel Young Life Club concentrated on the slogan "Think Snow" while they spent one day tobogganing at Camp Connell following a day of skiing on the slopes at Bear Valley. Skits and fellowship at the Lodge followed each day of snow sports.

Leaders accompanying the group were: Kath Minerreo, Kathy Leslie, Rita Copelli, Larry Challis, Jim Copsey, Leslie Leslie, Jerry Traynor, Kent Murtland, Steve Sanchez, and Dick Falge.

Members of the high school club were: Maureen Falge, Regina Panholzer, Laurie Harnie, Colleen Lee, Erin Davey, Tara De Sousa, Linda McKay, Jennifer Thompson, Sarah Hicks, Jenny Powell, Ellen Shapiro and Bianca Burford.

Hospital Auxiliary elects officers

FORMER VALLEY resident, Mrs. Frederick O. Capen, assumed the office of the Community Hospital Auxiliary president on Saturday at a combined annual meeting of the auxiliary and the Hospital Corporation. Mrs. Capen, an auxiliary member since 1958, served in many areas of the organization, including publication of its bulletin.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Capen were: Mrs. Gordon Paul Smith of Carmel Valley, vice president; Mrs. William Mauer, secretary; Miss Francis Friscia, treasurer; and Mrs. Richard Tourangeau, membership director.

Community Church circles to meet

THE TUESDAY Circle of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula on West Carmel Valley Road will meet February 21 at 1:15 p.m. Mrs. Howard Timbers will serve as hostess.

Louise Morris is hostess of the Wednesday Circle to meet February 22 at 12:30 p.m. at the above address. Ladies are requested to bring a sandwich, coffee and dessert will be served.

New board for Barracuda boosters

DICK FALGE HAS been elected president of the Carmel Barracuda Booster's Club, an organization made up of parents and friends of the swimming and diving team for children, 5-18, of the Carmel Unified School District.

Board members serving with Dick include: John Radon, vice president; Chuck McKay, immediate past president; Marikay Morris, secretary; and Dave Banks, treasurer. David Hardy is publicity chairman; Marcia Reardon, newsletter chairman; Sue Lloyd, suits chairman; Blair Buckner, recorder; Bette Nybakken, AAU representative;

John Olin, director of meets; Lorrie Stiles, Carmel Valley team mother, and Larry Challis, head coach.

To be announced are diving representative, chairman of awards and a Carmel team mother.

The Booster Club Board meets at 7:30 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month at the Carmelo School library. Anyone interested in assisting with this outstanding recreation program (285 swimmers and divers were involved last season) is cordially welcome to attend.

Weekend apple strudle demos at Barnyard

Recipes for apple strudle, "the kind grandmother used to make," and a Valentine cake for the one you love will be demonstrated this weekend as the Cooks' Club presentation at the Peppercorn in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel. Everyone is welcome; the free programs continue from 11 a.m.-3 p.m.

Homemade strudle will be prepared Saturday, Feb. 10; a recipe for a heart-shaped Valentine cake will be baked Sunday, Feb. 11.

Planners cave in

By AL EISNER

WHEN THE BOARD of supervisors gave its approval to the Specific Plan for the huge development at the Carmel Valley Ranch, hundreds of citizens turned out to urge denial. After interminable hours of hearings before the planning commission and the supervisors, approval was granted with very tough conditions attached.

Residents of Carmel Valley reasoned that the environment and the quality of life in Carmel Valley would be affected, but that the damage would be minimal if the developers could meet those conditions.

By granting approval to the subdivision map last week, the Monterey County Planning Commission capitulated on the conditions, and gave the green light to the developers from Oklahoma.

We have all been laboring under the impression that the developers would have to prove the existence of a separate water supply. The now infamous "Tularcitos Aquifer" which supposedly flowed through Robinson Canyon and was not connected to the Carmel Valley Aquifer, was to be tapped for water supply. The planning commission now says the developers can use Cal-Am water ... the same water supply the entire Monterey Peninsula draws upon ... the same water supply that proved woefully inadequate during the recent drought.

Another comforting thought was that the developers would be required to hook up any sewage disposal system to the Carmel Sanitary District or some other public agency. The incredibly complex and unproven plan they have for storage and disposal of sewage would have to be operated by a public entity ... or at least that is what we were led to believe. Now it appears that the developers will be permitted to operate their own plant if the Carmel Sanitary District can't or won't operate their plant.

The developers agreed to pay for a portion of the cost of "improving" the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Robinson Canyon Road when they got approval of the first phase of the residential development of 160 units. Now, because 20 units were deleted from the initial phase, that requirement is no longer in effect.

Also, tremendous cuts and fills, with an underpass resembling those in Los Angeles, will have to be used to construct the interchange, according to present plans.

What the heck is going on? Why is the county rushing pell-mell to give the developers just about everything they want without proper safeguards? Who needs the development, except the people who want to reap the profits? And why is our own planning commissioner, Bill Peters, so eager to grease the skids for the folks from Oklahoma?

I fervently hope the approval will be appealed to the board of supervisors, who might show more concern for the well-being of Carmel Valley than the planning commission.

If not ... well, heaven help us.

The mistrust of our public institutions and mere anxiety about our future are more the order than the exception. Three-quarters of the people do not trust their government. More than half of the eligible citizens again decided not to vote in the last election.

Why? Why the anti-government mood? Simply put, the citizens are revolting against political leaders who righteously spoke against excessive government spending but who in practice pursued the opposite course.

It is in this fundamental contradiction between what political leaders have said and what they have actually done that we find the cause of today's political malaise.

False prophets have risen to advocate more and more government spending as the cure—more bureaucratic programs and higher staffing ratios of professional experts. These false prophets can no longer distinguish the white horse of victory from the pale horse of death.

Most people feel worse, not better, about their government benefactor. The elderly find their fixed incomes eroding in half; those about to retire fear their future pensions will never keep pace.

As government makes itself more productive, it must also strip away the roadblocks and the regulatory underbrush that it often mindlessly puts in the path of private citizens. Unneeded licenses and proliferating rules can stifle initiative, especially for small business. Society is more interdependent and our capacity to harm both nature and ourselves is greater than ever. Yet many regulations primarily protect the past, prop up privilege or prevent sensible economic choices.

The above remarks are excerpted from Gov. Jerry Brown's inaugural address last week. We reprint it here because of its relevance to Carmel.

Carmel offers alternative credit courses

Under a new policy approved by the school district board of trustees, Carmel High School students can now get class credit in ways other than by attending classes.

The board voted 5-0 to approve four alternative means of earning credit in accordance with a recent change in California education law.

Students may now earn credit:

- By examination: they may take a test and receive credit for a class never attended by proving competency in the skills the class teaches.

- By independent study: the student designs a minimum nine-week program which must be approved by the principal or his agent as an appropriate subject.

- Through other educational programs: students can earn high school credit by taking college courses, summer school, night school and other similar programs.

- Through "alternative educational experiences": this includes any programs supervised by personnel other than district teachers and conducted away from school. The experiences must be part of the existing curriculum and must be described in a specific written agreement between the student, his parents, the district and the outside agency.

Supervisors to hear appeal Feb. 27 on use permit for Carmel Valley Ranch

The action of the Monterey County Planning Commission which granted a use permit to build 140 townhouses at Carmel Valley Ranch will be appealed to the Board of Supervisors Feb. 27 at 1:30 p.m.

The board Tuesday accepted the appeal filed by the Carmel Area Coalition, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the City of Carmel.

The appeal challenges the permits granted by the planning commission on the grounds that traffic, sewage and water problems that might be created by the project have not been answered as required by the specific plan for the development.

At the same hearing, the supervisors will consider approving the tentative subdivision map for the first residential phase of development on the property at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads.

The total project covers 1,700 acres. It proposes construction of 500 homes, a 100-room resort hotel, an 18-hole golf course and a 12-court tennis club. Construction on the golf course is underway and the tennis club is nearing completion.

Text of appeal by property owners, coalition, city

APPEAL TO: The Board of Supervisors of the County of Monterey.

FROM: Resolution No. 79-31 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, granting Use Permit No. 2271 to Carmel Valley Ranch.

BY: Carmel Area Coalition, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif.

The Board of Governors of Carmel Area Coalition, at its regular meeting on January 14, 1979, voted to take this appeal; the Board of Directors of Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, at its meeting of January 17, 1979, voted this appeal; and the Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, voted that it join the appeal at its meeting, January 29, 1979.

The foregoing persons, jointly, hereby appeal Resolution No. 79-31 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, granting Use Permit No. 2271 to Carmel Valley Ranch, passed and adopted January 10, 1979, written notice of which decision was mailed to the applicant on January 22, 1979.

This appeal is made and based upon the following points:
(1) The Planning Commission committed error, abused its discretion, and acted contrary to the public interest as follows:

a. Water. The Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan requires that the Tulareitos Aquifer be proved prior to the approval of any permit for the project.

b. Road Construction. The Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan requires that, prior to the approval of the first increment of residential units, the developer enter into an agreement with the County to financially participate in the construction of the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Road intersection, and of Carmel Valley Road to four lanes between Via Petra and Robinson Canyon Road, the developer to be credited against the road widening, if required to pay all of the cost for the intersection.

c. Sewage. The conditions with respect to sewage are so vague and speculative as to constitute an abandonment of the public interest. Further, said conditions open the door for the creation of another level of government specifically for the benefit of this particular developer creating serious problems for the county government and the taxpayer.

(2) The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion, in finding that the conditions placed on the Use Permit adequately mitigate any adverse environmental effect.

(3) The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion in that the facts do not support the findings made.

4. The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion in that the findings of fact made do not support the decisions reached.

FURTHER COMMENT

ON THE ABOVE POINTS FOLLOWS:

I. A. Water

The Specific Plan Requires Proving the Tulareitos Aquifer Before Approval Of Any Permit.

The plan with which we are concerned is Amended Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan, revised November 3, 1976, the date of its adoption by Resolution 76-514 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, and revised December 7, 1976, the date of its adoption by Board Order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Monterey, in which form it was further adopted by Resolution 77-3 of that board on January 3, 1977.

We are directly concerned with that portion of the plan entitled: Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan Amended Conditions of Approval which commences on Page 27, running through Page 33, and, it ought to be noted, speaks in mandatory language. Its preamble leaves little doubt of its nature:

Assuming that the Carmel Valley Ranch meets all the requirements of a Specific Plan as determined by Section 65451 of the Government Code, it should be emphasized that the Specific Plan is a beginning step and that all future use will require permits including but not limited to Use Permits, Preliminary and Tentative Subdivision Maps or both, and that the following conditions shall be applied to any pertinent permit or approval made in connection with this project.

The conditions having to do with "Water Supply"

"The Planning Commission committed error,

abused its discretion and acted contrary to the public interest"

"The water source must be proved before there is any development on

commence on the upper portion of Page 30. Subparagraph C. 1. indicates that California-American Water Company or another water company may provide the water supply, but subparagraph 3. particularly names the Tulareitos Aquifer:

3. "Source of water for the water company shall be sought from domestic wells penetrating the Tulareitos Aquifer and approved by the Director of Environmental Health with regard to quantity and quality. Adequate evidence of sustained pumping capacity (minimum of continuous one week pump test) and of chemical and bacteriological quality shall be submitted for review and approval before any other plans are approved or securing of any permits beyond the Specific Plan ..."

What could be clearer than that?

The language of the paragraph itself, and of the footnote to it, make crystal clear that this water source must be proved before "any development on the ranch property," the stated interpretation of an earlier Board of Supervisors.

I. B. Road Construction

The Specific Plan Requires, Before Approval of the First Residential Units, That Developer Agree With County to Financially Participate in the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Intersection Construction and Widening of Carmel Valley Road.

The portion of the Conditions of Approval that relates to the road construction is Subparagraph 1. under Traffic Conditions, which follows directly after the preamble to the mandatory Conditions of Approval:

1. The developer shall enter into an agreement with the County of Monterey to financially participate proportionally in the construction of the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Road intersection, and the construction of Carmel Valley Road to four lanes between Via Petra and Robinson Canyon Road (off-site road improvements). If the developer is required to pay 100 percent of the cost to construct this intersection, then the agreement will credit him with the portion that would have normally been paid by the County or others toward his portion of a four-lane Carmel Valley Road. This agreement shall be entered into prior to approval of the first increment of residential units.

Again, the language seems as clear as the water we would hope to produce from the Tulareitos Aquifer.

And, as the Use Permit and its conditions now ignore the Tulareitos Aquifer, so now also the road construction agreement.

These conditions were considered significant protections at the time of approval of the plan. As anyone then concerned can tell you, much time, labor, energy and thought went into their formulation. Have they now lost the mandatory character the plan so clearly gives them?

Reference to the road construction is also made, in general terms, on Page 14 of the plan, under Circulation. The language, however, is loose, and oriented, it would clearly appear, toward extracting the teeth in the Conditions of Approval.

It should be remembered that the Conditions of Approval, not only from their very nature, but also from their position later in the plan, by all reasonable rules of construction, should be deemed as controlling.

We would suppose that the Supervisors would not be taken in by this, as certain of the Planning Commissioners surely were.

I. C. Sewage

Sewage Handling Presents Serious Problems Not Adequately Considered in the Use Permit and Conditions.

As sketched briefly on Page 2 of this Notice, the Sewage question presents problems that the Use Permit appears not to treat adequately.

Because of the technical nature of the question, we have requested a professional opinion on the issue, which will be supplied to the Board, in written form, at a reasonable time prior to the hearing of this appeal, and which topic will be further orally addressed upon the hearing.

II. Findings of Mitigation of Adverse Environmental Effect and Omnibus Non-Detriment to Health, Safety, Peace, Morals, Comfort and General Welfare of Persons, Neighborhood and County.

These findings, the third and fourth on the Use Permit, appear to be in fulfillment of specific technical expectations of the ordinance as to use permits, and may have questionable foundation.

Much should be considered in order to make such general findings. In fact, such findings ought to have significance. But what they may well signify is that the body making the findings was not aware of any great public distress, and had not had a substantial outcry from the neighbors.

At the time that the plan was approved such distress and such outcry were manifest. The Conditions of Approval are dramatic witness of those concerns. Do we now ignore them?

Without going further, if we have a settling basin for sewage atop the Tulareitos Aquifer, the detrimental effect on environment and neighborhood begins to loom.

And with the operation of heavy equipment in the Carmel River bed, damage to that riverbed, the course of the river, crumbling walls requiring retaining reinforcement and detriment to the fauna of the river, as determined by the biologic reports mandated but never completed, all become accomplished fact.

And increased vehicular traffic over the Carmel Valley Road that should have been widened, and the Robinson Canyon Road intersection that should have been constructed, or undertaken—can anyone doubt the adverse effects?

Conclusion: It would appear manifest, and reason should compel the determination, that approval of this Use Permit was, to put it most gently and mildly, premature.

The Board of Supervisors should return the matter to the Planning Commission for a careful and comprehensive re-examination for compliance with the Conditions of Approval mandated by the Board when it passed and adopted the Specific Plan on December 7, 1976, and January 3, 1977.

Odello development hearing Wed.

development of a 200-room hotel, 97 condominiums, a farmers' market complex and access roads on 39 acres of the property. Another 70 acres of land would be retained in permanent agricultural use and 25 acres along the Carmel River would remain as open space.

Other alternatives discussed in the draft range from no development—keeping all the land for agricultural use—to construction of a maximum 156 homes and a 200-room hotel. The property east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River is now planted in row crops.

The commission has until the middle of March to review the draft plan and report back to the supervisors on the development alternatives it believes are acceptable.

The supervisors would then authorize an environmental impact report on the acceptable proposals. Once that report is complete and certified by the board, the Specific Plan would go back to the planning commission for further hearings and adoption. Development on the property also is subject to approval by the Coastal Commission, since the land lies within the boundaries of the coastal zone.

The hearing on Feb. 14 will be informational, according to Planning Director Ed DeMars, but also will deal with the merits of the different alternatives, he said.

He encouraged public testimony at the hearing.

THE DRAFT PLAN, presented to the supervisors last month, has not yet been presented formally to the commission.

The plan is virtually identical to the Odello family's own Agricultural Land Preservation System (ALPS) plan proposed last May. The Specific Plan draft differs by creating the 25-acre open space corridor along the Carmel River and moving the proposed hotel away from the levees and dikes along the river.

Sabastian Bordonaro, architect for the ALPS proposal, said the family will try to move the hotel back to the original location.

He said he believes the hotel would be less obtrusive if it is built against the river dikes, than if it is constructed on flat land along the property's Highway 1 frontage.

The consultants with Williams, Platzek and Mocine, who prepared the draft plan, made the change because they said preservation of plant and animal life along river corridors is required by Coastal Commission policies.

The Odello ALPS plan called for a footbridge across the river leading to several "honeymoon cottages" in the area designated for open space with public trail access.

Final adoption of a Specific Plan for the property is scheduled for October.

Weekend hike

The third annual Valentine's Day hike through the oak knolls of Toro Regional Park near Salinas and a loop trip through the Forest of Nisene Marks are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club this weekend. All interested hikers are welcome.

The Valentine's Day hike Saturday, Feb. 10 is a moderate eight-mile excursion through the trails of Toro Park with a 1,200-foot elevation gain. Hikers will meet at the Cinema 70 parking lot.

For more information, phone Larry Lapidus, 1-422-5529.

A six-mile loop hike through the Loma Prieta Lumber Co. railroad grade trail and a walk to China Camp in the Forest of Nisene Marks is planned Sunday, Feb. 11.

For more information, phone Merrill Jones, 624-3052, evenings.

Task force members named

Five of eight members of a growth management task force were appointed Tuesday by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The appointments included a former planning commission chairman and one of the leading attorneys for land developers in the Monterey County.

The board, on a 5-0 vote, also approved the list of goals the panel must accomplish before it reports back to the board on May 1.

Named to the task force were: Marit Evans, a former Monterey County Planning Commission chairman, nominated by the League of Women Voters; attorney Brian Finegan of Salinas, chosen by the Association of General Contractors of Monterey County; attorney Joseph Sullivan of Monterey, the current chairman of the planning commission, representing the commission; Ed Moncrief of Central Coast Counties Development Corporation, representing low-income housing groups; and Harry Foster, representing the Building and Trades Council of Monterey County.

Remaining to be appointed are a South County rancher by Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City, a representative of the board of supervisors, who will have no vote in task force actions. Those appointments will be made next Tuesday.

The board instructed the task force to report back with answers to questions in six specific areas:

- Is a proposed 1 percent growth rate appropriate for the county outside the incorporated cities? This would allow 947 new homes and apartments this year.
- How should the growth be allocated between eight different regions of the county—by past historical trends, by encouraging development in slow-growth areas or by using utility capacity as a limiting factor?
- How much of the growth quota should be set aside for low-cost housing?
- How can the county encourage more low- and moderate-cost housing?
- How can an allocation system take into account fluctuations in the housing market because of changing interest rates and other factors? What effect would the growth limit have on the construction industry?
- Should allocations be made at one time each year? How should the county make the allocations?

Round Table Pizza opens in Village

ROUND TABLE PIZZA, owned by El-Rey Investments, has opened in the Carmel Valley Village on Delfino Place. Bill Blum, vice president of the local chain of pizza-serving restaurants, said the firm is a family operation that has set a policy of community involvement. The restaurant will sponsor local youth groups, including baseball teams this season.

Carmel resident Michael Weaver, former manager of the Monterey Round Table Pizza, has moved to the Village store to head the staff of 10 employees.

Though the first Round Table was established in 1962 in San Jose, the chain did not open on the Peninsula until eight years ago when El-Ray Investments established a pizza parlor in Salinas. Their next parlors were opened in Monterey and Salinas.

Because of the population growth in Carmel Valley, they decided on a Village location. "Many people would come from the Valley and request we move out to the Village," Blum said.

Middle School students 'dig' applied arts classes

A blend of shop and arts classes

The applied arts classes offered at Carmel Middle School are only one of the new avenues open to students in the sixth through eighth grades.

Sixth graders are required to take a 10-week crafts course during their first year at Middle School. For the other three quarters of the year, they divide their time between art, music and health sections.

Ken Wiese has been teaching the crafts section for 25 years. Under his tutelage, students get their first experiences with ceramics, woodworking, metalwork, mosaics and plastics.

This blend of shop and art classes is required both for boys and girls. The co-ed approach to what has been regarded as male territory in other school districts is nothing new at Carmel. Wiese said the district has been "doing this ever since I've been here. It's one of the neat things about Carmel."

And, he is quick to add, "the girls hold their own." More than 100 students will pass through the classes this year; later, many will take advanced classes during their three years at Middle School.

T. J. PILKINGTON uses a sander on his woodshop project as teacher's assistant David Woodward looks on and gives advice on the work. Pilkington wears safety goggles to protect his eyes during the work.

Hatton Canyon construction delayed; wooded acres studied

By KEN PETERSON

WITH PROPOSED road construction in Hatton Canyon delayed for at least six years, Monterey County officials are studying how to improve recreational access to the wooded area at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Supervisor Sam Farr said Tuesday he has requested a study by the county public works and parks department that would detail how the area could be opened up for hiking and bridle trails.

Farr said he would also like to see the area put to recreational uses similar to the outdoor facilities in Mission Trail Park in Carmel.

However, any such plans must be approved by the California Department of Transportation, which acquired the land in 1963 to build a four-lane freeway.

Strong local opposition to the freeway proposal as well as financial belt-tightening by Caltrans has postponed the project indefinitely.

Last July, the Carmel City Council voted unanimously to oppose construction of the freeway through the 2.3-mile canyon located east of and paralleling Highway 1 between Carpenter Street and Carmel Valley Road. Instead, the council endorsed a smaller scale project—a winding two-lane road through the steep canyon.

However, Caltrans officials told the Pine Cone Wednesday that any highway project estimates for an additional lane on Carmel Hill.

"The Hatton Canyon Project is not dead," said Caltrans project engineer Henry Case. "We would like to build some revised version of our original proposal if we can get the financing and local support for it."

Carmel Valley vegetation study is meeting topic

A public hearing to discuss the Carmel Valley Vegetation Study along the Carmel River has been set for next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

County Supervisor Michal Moore will conduct the hearing on the lengthy study prepared for the county Board of Supervisors.

"This study, which is more than 100 pages long, discusses the effects of sedimentation, erosion and the whole range of alternatives of the drawdown on the aquifer in Carmel Valley. It tries to project what effect this is having on the water table of the Carmel River," Moore told the Pine Cone.

Copies of the report may be reviewed at the Carmel City Hall, Monterey City Hall, Monterey Library and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District office in the Carmel Hill Professional Building on the Holman Highway.

Monterey City Hall is at Madison and Pacific streets.

County Transportation Commission is analyzing the environmental impact of the council's two-lane road proposal. They will include their findings in an overall regional transportation plan due later this year.

At the same time, Caltrans is studying small-scale improvements along Highway 1 that would reduce the traffic bottleneck on Carmel Hill between Rio Road and Carpenter Street.

Web Beckstead, deputy district director for Caltrans in San Luis Obispo, said the department is updating its designs and cost estimates for an additional lane on Carmel Hill.

Beckstead said figures on current costs could get to Farr for his review within the next few weeks. Actual construction on such a project would not begin for a year or two years, depending upon how much environmental review is required.

Getting money just to design a two-lane Hatton Canyon Highway would require endorsement of either the Monterey County Board of Supervisors or the MCTC.

Monterey County has also been looking for a corporation yard site in Carmel Valley where it can store road maintenance equipment and materials. The mouth of Hatton Canyon might be a good site for the yard, Farr said. Public Works Director Bruce McClain is studying the possibility.

The two county projects could come up for a decision by the supervisors during the budget session later this year.

Subdividers seek 10 lots on 10 acres

SUBDIVIDERS OF A 10-acre parcel along the Carmel River are trying to find an acceptable way to put 10 homesites on their property and keep all of them out of the 100-year floodplain.

Roglar Associates of Seaside, the developers, offered the new subdivision map for the property after the Monterey County Planning Commission appeared ready to delete three lots at its Jan. 31 meeting.

The three homesites the commission wanted to cut were located within the 100-year floodplain of the river.

The three developers—Roger Fulton, Clark Herbert and Harry Clarke—had been arguing the merits of their original proposal for almost an hour before they produced an alternate subdivision map.

This annoyed Commission Chairman Joseph Sullivan, who criticized them for wasting the commission's time rather than answering its concerns about floodplain construction.

Commissioners indicated at a hearing last December that they would not approve the three Rancho Bonita homesites closest to the river. They took the new plans under submission and continued the hearing until Feb. 28.

The subdivision is located on the south side of Carmel Valley Road, just west of the Valley Hills shopping area and Wolter's Hacienda Market. It is adjacent to the proposed Valley Hills subdivision (31 homes, 43 condominiums) to the west and the approved 15-lot Prado del Sol subdivision to the east. The property is zoned for single-family homes, one unit per acre.

At present, there are two rental houses on a corner of the land. The rest of the property is rocky river bottom terrain with a stand of eucalyptus trees at the south side, Fulton said.

The three Roglar partners plan to live in three of the homes, to be designed by Monterey architect Paul Davis. The subdivision homes will range in size from 2,000 to 2,400 square feet.

DURING THE COMMISSION hearing, Fulton and his partners contended that floodwaters were unlikely to reach the three disputed homesites. In any case, they said, the houses could be "floodproofed."

Herbert said the group had tried several times to produce acceptable plans, moving the homesites from the floodplain; but could not get clearance from the county Health Department for septic tanks. The county requires a one-acre lot for a septic tank. The developers were trying to cluster the homes on smaller lots outside the floodplain.

The new subdivision map leaves each homesite on a one-acre lot, with the homes themselves situated past the high-water mark for a 100-year floodplain.

Fulton said the county has approved other houses closer to the river than any of the Rancho Bonita sites.

'Robles Revolt' shoots down subdivision near Village

Three development proposals for the creation of 13 building lots in Robles del Rio, near Carmel Valley Village, aroused the opposition of residents of the area worried about congestion and sewage problems.

Banding together as the "Robles Revolt," the residents succeeded in convincing the county Planning Commission that environmental problems should be overcome before any more lots are created in the Robles area.

Two of the developers appealed to the Board of Supervisors. The supervisors rejected their appeal. On Tuesday, the developer of the last subdivision withdrew his appeal—perhaps because he knew the outcome.

The supervisors rejected two other subdivisions in the immediate vicinity at a hearing in January. The hearing on the Steele-Cooper project, scheduled the same day, was continued until this week after the other developments were denied.

The three subdivisions would have created 13 housing sites on Calle de los Agrinensors in the community on the south side of the Carmel River from Carmel Valley Village.

Neighbors argued that the inadequate road and water systems, coupled with fire protection and septic sewage disposal problems, require a ban on all future land divisions in the area. Only when those problems are solved should new development be considered, opponents of the project said.

They did not object to construction of homes on existing building sites, but to creation of new sites.

The Steele-Cooper project would have created three lots on a 22.8-acre parcel. The other proposals turned down were the three-lot Abraham Loefsky subdivision; and the seven-lot Vista Robles subdivision.

Slimmon to act on office building

Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon will decide Thursday, Feb. 8, whether local developers can construct a scaled-down version of an office building in Carmel Valley at the corner of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

Plans for the proposed building have been reduced from three to two stories after county officials ruled last year that the building would be too tall.

Slimmon said the two-story building, which will be adjacent to the new post office on Carmel Rancho Boulevard, is under the 35-foot height maximum for Lower Carmel Valley. Originally, the building was designed to be 45 feet tall.

The structure, with interior courtyard and underground parking, was designed by architect Paul Davis for Herma Smith Curtis and Henry Laskin. The developers will ask for a variance from Slimmon to increase the lot coverage of the building by 10 percent to the 60 percent maximum. This is to make up for space lost in the rejected third story. The building will have 20,000 feet of leasable office space.

The Monterey County Planning Commission must approve the design for the proposed edifice.

Minor injuries in sideswiping

A 33-year-old Carmel Valley woman sustained minor injuries Friday night when her car was sideswiped by an oncoming car on Carmel Valley Road.

Martha Eugenia Aldrich refused hospital treatment for her injuries following the 10:10 p.m. accident at Brookdale Drive, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The CHP said she was driving eastbound and rounding a curve at Brookdale, when a westbound car driven by Otela Silva of Carmel Valley crossed the center line, struck her vehicle and collided with a roadside fence.

No other injuries were reported.

In addition, the center will offer martial arts classes Monday evenings, 6:30-8:30 p.m., taught by Jim Marshall. Rosie Rios will teach disco dancing Tuesday evenings, 8-9 p.m. Future plans include regular film showings at the center on Ford and Carmel Valley roads.

More information about the programs is available by phoning Rudy Lamar, 659-4644 or Ken Nixon, 375-9489. Volunteers are also needed to help with the programs.

MPC registration closes on Saturday

There is still time to register for the Monterey Peninsula College spring semester which began Monday, Jan. 29.

Late registration will be accepted through Saturday, Feb. 10. Students should come to the Admissions Office and check posted class schedules, complete registration forms, pay fees and attend the classes of their choice, according to Registrar Sally Jones.

The Admissions Office is open from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Friday. Friday evening and Saturday students may register in class.
